The knowledge of the English language can be proven with certificates of equivalent level of other entities (universities or not), irrespective of their legal form, provided that they are accredited or officially recognised by the competent authority of the relevant country to conduct examinations and issue certificates of knowledge of the English language.

These certificates must be accompanied with an attestation of the issuing body that, both the issuing body and the certificates are accredited by the respective national authority and that the certification applies to the assessment of the basic communication skills (writing skills, speaking skills, reading skills and listening skills).

If no accreditation or recognition body exists at the relevant country, it is required a certificate issued by the competent Ministry or Embassy in Greece, that that the certificates issues from the relevant bodies are acceptable in the public sector of the relevant country as valid certificates of knowledge of the English language at the respective level (B2), in accordance with the Common European Framework of Reference for languages (CEFR).

The competent regulatory authority for Great Britain is the Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual).
